Challenge-Led Research Practices

Research practices are fast evolving. The rise of interdisciplinarity, the popularity of co-produced research, the ever-increasing importance of impact and the decolonial turn present challenges to traditional approaches to research and provide innovative and pioneering new methods and theories with which to address the challenges of the 21st century.

At Bristol University Press we have always championed publishing with a purpose and have been a home for the best work on participatory research. We aim to become a home for work that explores these new research practices, their value to society and how they are evolving.

For more information please visit our website below and see the reverse side of this flyer for a selection of titles available in the area.

If you have a proposal you wish to discuss, please email Philippa Grand, Publisher for Research Methods and Practices, philippa.grand@bristol.ac.uk.
